HOW TO PLAY THIS ADVENTURE

START HERE.

You will need the D&D® Basic rules, a set of polyhedral dice, paper, a pencil, and an eraser. Don't use a pen, because your traits and possessions may change during the adventure.

Read all of the "R" rules entries before starting the adventure.

R1. Welcome to the world of Sargon the Wizard. You're about to set out on a thrilling, magic-filled adventure in a dangerous, haunted castle, and you'll be on your own. Only your wits and your weapons can help you.

If you choose one of the prerolled characters provided with the adventure, your character will be a magic-user or an elf. If you decide to use your own character for this adventure, the character cannot be higher than third level. Your character cannot use any spell, magic item, or equipment that is not listed on p. 31-32.

This is a solo adventure. You read entries just like this one. Each entry asks you to make a decision about where you want to go or what you want to do. Some entries, like this one, simply direct you to the next entry. Read entry R2.

R2. Choosing an entry: Most entries in this adventure list several options for you. There are many different areas to explore in and around Lion Castle. Because of this, all of the adventure entries are lettered and numbered. If you are exploring the areas outside the castle, all entries begin with the letter "C" (courtyard entries). If you are exploring inside the castle, all entries begin with the letter "L" (Lion Castle entries).

The "C" entries are divided into five areas: the castle outskirts, the outer curtain, the outer ward, the inner curtain, and the inner ward. The "L" entries encompass several levels of the castle, but are not divided into specific categories.

For details on keeping records during your adventure, read entry R3.

R3. Keeping records: You will keep a record of your adventure as you explore Lion Castle. Each time you find an item on your journey, add it to your character sheet. If you lose an item, cross the item off your character sheet.

When you take an item from a room, that room's entry will direct you to cross out the sentence that describes the item. Doing this allows you to change the adventure the next time you or someone else plays it.

For details on the magic journal, read entry R4.

R4. The magic journal: The solo adventure pages in this booklet are bounded on each side by spaces marked "Magic Journal." Reminders on recordkeeping and how to play certain entries are here. You may also use the journal to make notes to yourself about a specific entry or direction.

You may write anything you wish in the magic journal. Some examples are: "Avoid L21," and "Enter through the postern gate." These notes will come in especially handy when you decide to play the adventure again as a different character.

For details on mapping, read entry R5.

R5. Mapping: Several maps of Lion Castle are shown on the booklet cover. These maps are not complete. You will have to fill in some of the blank areas as you explore the castle. A light grid is printed over the maps to make mapping easier. Most "L" entries list room dimensions for you.

All walls, ceilings, and floors in Lion Castle are made of stone, and all inside walls are 10 feet high.

You may erase the additions you have made to the maps when you play the adventure as another character, or when other players take characters into the castle.

For details on fighting monsters, read entry R6.

R6. Fighting monsters: When an entry states that you encounter a monster, go to the Combat Checklist on the booklet cover and follow its steps. You never encounter more than one monster at a time during this adventure. The following entries explain the steps of the Combat Checklist. For details on initiative, read entry R7.

R7. Initiative: Roll 1d6 for yourself first, and then for the monster you have encountered. If your die roll is higher, you may attack, or you may try to talk to the monster. (If the die rolls are the same, roll both dice again.) If you speak the monster's language, the monster does not attack and allows you to pass unharmed. If you try to talk to a monster in a language it doesn't know, you lose initiative and the monster attacks.

For details on movement, read entry R8.

R8. Movement: Movement rates are used only in combat. During this part of step B on the Combat Checklist, you may use a defensive maneuver (retreating, or throwing food or treasure to a monster).

If you choose to retreat, compare your movement rate per round with the monster's movement rate per round. If your rate is greater than the monster's rate, you escape the monster, and you may go on to the next entry of your choice. Before you leave, however, the attacking monster gets one more chance to hit you, gaining a +2 bonus to its hit roll. For this attack, you must calculate your Armor Class as if you had no shield. Also, you cannot defend yourself. If your movement rate per round is less than or equal to the monster's rate, you must stay and fight the monster. You may decide to throw food or treasure to the monster at this point.

If you choose to throw food or treasure to a monster, subtract the item you threw from your character sheet. Intelligent monsters are stopped only if you throw treasure (a coin, gem, or magic item). You may encounter the following intelligent monsters in this adventure: bugbear, gnoll, goblin, hobgoblin, orc, wereboar, and wererat. All other monsters in this adventure stop only if you throw food (1 ration).

After you have thrown the food or treasure, roll 1d6. On a 1, 2, or 3, the monster stops and marvels at its "gift." Consider the stopped creature as a "defeated" monster. You cannot take its treasure, however. On a roll of 4, 5, or 6, the monster ignores your gift and attacks.

For details on morale, read entry R9.

R9. Morale: During this part of step B on the Combat Checklist, roll 2d6 (only if you have hit the monster once). If the dice roll is greater than the monster's morale, the monster is demoralized and tries to retreat. You gain a +2 bonus to your hit rolls when a monster retreats. If the monster's movement rate per round is greater than your movement rate per round, or if you do not attack the monster as it retreats, the monster escapes. You cannot take treasure from a monster that escapes.

HOW TO PLAY THIS ADVENTURE

Example: During your combat round on the Combat Checklist, you hit a bugbear, causing 2 points of damage. In the bugbear's combat round, you roll 2d6 to determine if the bugbear's morale will fail. Its morale is 9. You roll an 11. The bugbear has failed its morale check. It retreats at the rate of 30 feet per round. You move at the rate of 40 feet per round, so you can attack the creature as it retreats. Add 2 to your hit roll because the bugbear is retreating.

For details on using magic in combat, read entry R10.

R10. Using magic in combat: If you decide to cast a spell when you attack a monster, you cannot use hand-to-hand combat in the same round. You may cast only one spell per combat round.

When you cast a spell at a monster, consider the monster to be in a 10-foot-square area and within 10 feet of you.

Some spells allow for the monster to make a saving throw to avoid the spell's full effect. Consult the monster's "Save" rating and then check Table 4: Saving Throws on the booklet cover. Monster saving throws are explained further on p. 23 of the Dungeon Masters Rule Book.

Because of the strange magic in Lion Castle, some spells do not work the same as they normally would. Elf and magic-user spells higher than second level do not work at all in the castle. For details on spells whose effects are altered in this adventure, read entry R16.

For details on hand-to-hand combat, read entry R11.

R11. Hand-to-hand combat: If you attack a monster and do not use a spell, you are engaging in hand-to-hand combat.

When it is your turn on the Combat Checklist to attack, consult Table 5: Character Hit Rolls on the booklet cover and make a hit roll. If you hit, check Table 6: Variable Weapon Damage to see how much damage you cause to the monster. If you have no weapon, your bare fist does 1 point of damage. If you have Strength bonus modifiers, add these to the damage. Subtract the total damage from the monster's hit points. When a monster's hit points reach 0, the monster is defeated. If a defeated monster had treasure, you may add that treasure to your character sheet.

When a monster attacks you, consult Table 7: Monster Hit Rolls on the booklet cover and make a hit roll for the monster. Some monsters may have more than one attack. For each of the monster's attacks that hits you, roll to find the damage the attack does to you, using the dice indicated in the monster's statistics. Subtract the damage from your hit points. If your hit points reach 0, you are defeated. Entry R18 (Defeated Characters) explains what to do when this happens.

If a monster hits you with a poisonous attack, you must make a saving throw vs. poison. If you fail the saving throw, you take 1 hit point of damage per Hit Die of the monster that hit you.

Special rules apply for some of the monsters you may encounter in this adventure. For details on these special monsters, read entry R12.

R12. Combat for special monsters: The following monsters in this adventure have special attacks or defenses.

Giant bee: If a giant bee stings you, the bee dies, but you must make a saving throw vs. poison. The stinger causes 1 point of damage before you are able to pull it out.

Stirge: If a stirge hits you, it attaches itself to you and causes 1-3 points of damage per round until it is defeated.

Lycanthropes (wereboar, wererat, weretiger): You may use a sprig of wolfsbane as a weapon against any of these creatures. If you use wolfsbane to hit one of them, the creature must make a saving throw vs. poison. If its saving throw fails, the creature runs away, leaving behind its treasure. When a lycanthrope is in animal form, only magic weapons, silvered weapons, or spells can harm it. If you defeat a lycanthrope, it returns to human form. The wereboar and weretiger cannot speak normal languages when in animal form, but a wererat can speak Common in any form.

If you lose more than 1/2 of your hit points in combat with a lycanthrope, you contract the disease lycanthropy. If you are an elf, you die in 2d12 days, unless you find a cure. If you are a magic-user, you turn into the same type of werecreature as the one you were fighting. This transformation occurs in 2d12 days, unless you find a cure.

Giant Rat: If a giant rat bites you, you have a chance of becoming diseased. Roll 1d20. If you roll a 1, the rat infects you. You may be able to avoid the disease by making a saving throw vs. poison. If you fail the saving throw, roll 1d4. If you roll a 1, you die in 1d6 days unless you find a cure. If you roll a 2, 3, or 4, you are sick and have a -1 hit roll penalty. The penalty lasts until you find a cure for the sickness.

For details on fighting monsters in the dark, read entry R13.

R13. Fighting monsters in the dark: Elves have infravision and can fight monsters in the dark. If a magic-user has no light source and is fighting a monster in the dark, the magic-user suffers a -4 penalty on all hit rolls. The monster gains a +4 bonus to all hit rolls. These hit roll modifiers apply until the area is lighted or combat has ended. The magic-user may cast a light or continual light spell in this situation, if he has learned the spell that morning. He cannot read his spell book in the dark.

For details on wandering monster encounters, read entry R14.

R14. Wandering monster encounters: Entries occasionally ask you to "check for a wandering monster." To check for such an encounter, roll 1d6. If you roll a 2, 3, 4, 5, or 6, you do not encounter a monster, and you may go on in the adventure. If you roll a 1, you encounter a wandering monster. Follow these steps when you have such an encounter:

1. Refer to Table 1: Monster Die Rolls and Modifiers to determine what die roll and modifier should be used on Table 2: Wandering Monsters. Your location in the castle affects what type of monster you encounter. For example, if you are exploring Castle Level I, you roll 1d12 and add 6 to your die roll. If you rolled a 4, your final result would be 10.

2. Refer to Table 2 to determine which monster you encounter, using the modified die roll from step 1. For example, if your modified die roll from step 1 is 10, you check to see which monster corresponds to that number on Table 2. The monster you encounter is a giant black widow spider.

If you encounter a boar, a giant rat, or a tiger, roll 1d6. If you roll a 1, 2, or 3, the creature is a lycanthrope (wereboar, wererat, weretiger). These creatures' statistics are listed on Table 2 next to their "normal" counterparts.

3. After you have resolved your wandering monster encounter, record any treasure additions or hit point losses on your character sheet. Then return to your current entry.

HOW TO PLAY THIS ADVENTURE

For details on healing and resting, read entry R15.

R15. Healing and resting: If you want to regain lost hit points and do not have any magic means to do so, you may stop at an entry and rest. When you decide to rest, follow these steps:

1. Subtract 1 day's rations from your character sheet. If you have no rations, subtract 2 hit points because of hunger.

2. Roll 1d6. If you roll a 1, a wandering monster surprises you as you sleep. (The monster finds you even if you are invisible.) Refer to entry R14 (Wandering Monster Encounters) for details on how to run the encounter.

3. If you do not encounter a wandering monster while you are resting, add 1 hit point to your hit point score on the character sheet.

4. You may study your spell book and regain any spells you lost so far during the adventure. Return to your current entry.

For details on how Lion Castle alters certain spell effects, read entry R16.

For details on defeated characters, read entry R18.

R16. Altered spell effects: These spells have different effects in this adventure.

First level magic-user and elf spells

Charm person. This spell may affect one living bugbear, gnoll, goblin, hobgoblin, ogre, or orc. The monster makes a saving throw vs. spells. If the saving throw succeeds, the spell has no effect. If the saving throw fails, the monster does not attack and hands over its treasure (if you ask for it). The monster does not answer questions, fight for you, or go with you. If you attack the monster with a weapon or another spell, this spell's effect is automatically broken. The spell's effect is also broken as soon as you enter another room or area.

Hold portal. This spell's effect is broken as soon as you enter another room or area.

Light. This spell defeats a monster if you cast it on the monster's eyes. The spell's effect is broken as soon as you enter another room or area.

Protection from evil. This spell's effect is broken as soon as you enter another room or area.

Read magic. This spell's effect is broken as soon as you enter another room or area.

Sleep. Roll 2d8 when you cast this spell. The dice roll indicates how many of a monster's Hit Dice are affected. If the dice roll is greater than the monster's number of Hit Dice, the monster falls asleep. No saving throws are allowed. The spell's effect is broken as soon as you enter another room or area. The spell does not affect giant draco lizards, lions, tigers, or weretigers.

Second level magic-user or elf spells

Continual light. You may cast this spell at any monster's eyes. The monster must make a saving throw vs. spells. If the saving throw fails, the monster is blinded and defeated. If the saving throw succeeds, the globe of light appears, but the monster suffers no ill effects. The spell's effect fades away as soon as you enter another room or area.

Invisibility. This spell's effect is broken as soon as you attack a monster or cast another spell.

Levitate. You may cast this spell on yourself when you retreat during combat. If the monster you are fleeing cannot fly, you escape. The monster cannot hit you. This spell has no effect if the monster you are fleeing can fly. The spell's effect is broken as soon as you enter another room or area.

You may also use this spell to scout out the surrounding area when you read an entry that lists any entry from C1 to C13 as an option. You may use the spell to read ahead to any of those "C" entries without actually traveling to that entry. In this case, the spell's effect is broken as soon as you have read all of the entries listed in your current entry.

Other "C" entries indicate when you may use this spell. These entries also tell you how long the spell's effect lasts.

Web. This spell's effect is broken as soon as you enter another room or area.

For details on how certain magic items work in Lion Castle, read entry R17.

R17. Magic items in Lion Castle: Sargon's power within Lion Castle affects how some magic items work within its walls (all "L" entries). This entry lists these items' altered effects.

Potion of gaseous form. This potion does not work within Lion Castle ("L" entries).

Potion of healing. If you have a potion of healing, you may drink it at any time, except when you are fighting a monster. Roll 1d6 and add 1. This modified die roll is the number of hit points you regain from drinking the potion.

Potion of invisibility. This potion does not work within Lion Castle ("L" entries).

Potion of levitation. This potion does not work within Lion Castle ("L" entries).

Ring of invisibility. This ring does not work within Lion Castle ("L" entries).

Ring of protection +1. This ring works at all times. You may wear two rings of protection +1 at the same time, doubling the effects of one ring. Each ring improves your Armor Class by 1 and adds a +1 bonus to all of your saving throws.

Wand of paralyzation. You may use this item during the Magic Spells part of step B on the Combat Checklist. When you use the wand in combat, the monster you are fighting must make a saving throw vs. paralysis. If the saving throw fails, the monster is paralyzed until you leave the room or area.

Elven boots. This item has no effect in this adventure.

Rope of climbing. This item works only when a specific entry lists its use as an option. You may always use it as a normal rope. If you cut the rope during the adventure, the rope's length still stays the same.

Magic items whose effects are not altered by Lion Castle include gauntlets of ogre power, elven cloaks, and bags of holding.

For details on hand-to-hand combat, read entry R11.

For details on defeated characters, read entry R18.

R18. Defeated characters: If a monster defeats you, go to your character sheet, cross out the character's name, and circle the possessions still held by that character when he was defeated.

In the magic journal next to the last entry you read, write the following notes: "Skeleton of (character's name). Refer to circled items on character sheet."

When you play the adventure as a new character, you may find a defeated character's possessions. You may take these possessions and use them in your new adventure. Add any items you find in this manner to your character sheet. You cannot read another magic-user's spell book.

For details on beginning the adventure, read entry R19.

R19. Beginning the adventure:

Pages 31 and 32 of this booklet list six characters you may use for this adventure. Tear page 31 along the perforation and use it as your character sheet. Choose one of the characters from this sheet.

Now you are ready to begin! Read entry C1.

To choose a character, turn to p. 31 and 32. Then start the adventure at entry C1 on p. 7.

Castle outskirts

C1. Roars of laughter and the sound of hearty voices in song rise from the tables in this warm, smoky tavern. You make your way through the crowd, listening as people talk of the great wizard Sargon and his haunted castle.

Several of the tavern's patrons are apprentices of local magic-users, and that is your occupation as well. You have joined the others tonight in the village of Sarsdell to trade stories and talk of your favorite topic—Lion Castle.

"Sargon was the greatest magic-user of all time, he was," says an old woman who has stopped at your table. "No magic worked on him, no sir, none but his own. Why, I see warlocks, wizards, and sorcerers pass through here every day, and not one of them will go near that Lion Castle of his. They're afraid they'll lose all of their powers!"

"Not us, ma'am!" says one of your friends. "We've nothing to lose and everything to gain by exploring Sargon's castle."

"What is this Lion Castle?" a newcomer asks. The tavernkeeper, who has told this story many times before, eagerly steps forth to inform the newcomer.

"Sargon was a strong wizard indeed, son, and his castle is a sight to behold. He built it on the grassland plains in the land they now call the Ethengar Khanate. Lion Castle is a beauty, son. She rises above the landscape, built so she looks like a great cat about to pounce!"

The newcomer is entranced. You smile, because you know how this story goes. The tavernkeeper continues.

"Sargon's ghost resides there now, along with more than a few creatures, I suspect. The old wizard's ghost haunts the hallways, waiting for a worthy heir. Well, plenty have tried to enter that great stone cat, after having heard of all its great magical rewards. Not many return, though, and would you believe, those who make it back have turned into wild creatures! Whole armies have been defeated trying to enter Lion Castle, but they never knew the secret."

"What secret? What secret?" the newcomer pleads.

"Only one person at a time may pass through the magical defenses of Lion Castle, son, and magic-users and elves are about the only ones who even stand a chance."

The tavernkeeper's tale has stirred you and the others once again, and you decide to draw lots to see who will be the first to enter Sargon's Lion Castle.

The tavernkeeper gladly watches over your table, waiting to see who will go forth to face Sargon's ghost.

The lots are drawn. You are chosen! The tavernkeeper claps his hands and skips back to a cabinet in the back of the room. "You're a lucky one, my friend," he says as he pulls pieces of parchment from the cabinet. "Take these maps, and this magic journal with you. If you do not survive your quest, this journal magically reappears here in the tavern, so your friends and I know what sort of fate you befell."

The tavernkeeper hands you the journal and some incomplete maps of the castle. "Others before you were able to map this much before, ah, retiring. Finish these maps, and find that ghost, and you will be a hero indeed!"

"Now listen closely," says one of your friends. "Follow the Streel River east for six days, and then hike north for two. After eight days, you should be able to see that great stone lion rising from the plain."

"Be careful as you approach it," another friend cautions. "Wild beasts may attack you."

The tavernkeeper breaks in, "You'll come to the outer curtain wall, and you'll see towers and gatehouses. Once you get beyond the curtain, you have to cross the outer ward. From there, friend, you can explore the castle's towers, gatehouses, and inner levels. Somewhere in that castle roams the ghost of Sargon, waiting for you to inherit all his possessions!"

In the morning, you pack for your journey, study your spell book, and prepare your weapon. You pack 3 weeks' worth of iron rations for the long quest.

Your friends accompany you to the edge of Sarsdell, shake your hand, and wish you luck.

"I almost forgot to tell you," one of your friends says. "Legends say that entering the castle at night is very unwise. Rest before you enter, and approach in the light of dawn." You thank your friend and turn to leave.

You cross the river by ferry and turn east to walk along the river. The great grassland of the Ethengar Khanate stretches out ahead of you.

Six days pass. You have seen few animals since you left Sarsdell, and you have talked to no one. You turn north away from the riverbank, and begin crossing the flat grasslands.

As the sun begins to set on the 8th day, a slight gray mound appears on the north horizon. The head of a huge stone beast pokes above the waving grass. Lion Castle stands ahead, only 1 day away!

Dawn comes quickly, and you set out toward the castle. The time seems to drag. Finally, in the late afternoon, you come upon a slight rise in the land. All of Lion Castle stands majestically before you. A 10-foot-high outer curtain wall stretches for 255 feet at the base of the castle. Twenty-foot-high towers rise from the wall, which is rimmed by a dry moat. Lion Castle itself rests on a 10-foot-high mound within the outer curtain wall. The lion's head rises 66 feet from the mound. Its great, roaring mouth faces west.

Check for a wandering monster in this room. Follow the steps in entry R14.

If you encounter and defeat a monster, you may leave the room. Read entry L12. If a monster defeats you, read entry C42.

L3. You are on Castle Level III. Twenty murder holes in the floor help light this large, oddly-shaped room. The dull, red glow of molten lead lights the room's west end.

The room measures 35 feet at its widest point. It is roughly 37 feet long.

Two troughs run from the west wall down the face of the lion. A lever is set into this wall. The words "hot lead" are scrawled in Common above the lever.

You may look through the 1-foot-wide murder holes. More holes pierce the floor of the room below this one. Double doors stand in the east wall of the room.

Check for a wandering monster in this room. Follow the steps in entry R14.

If you encounter and defeat a monster, you may go through the double doors. Read entry L13. If a monster defeats you, read entry C42.

L4. You are on Castle Level I. This dark hallway is 5 feet wide and 78 feet long. A closed portcullis blocks the east end. Double doors stand at the hallway's west end. You cannot open the portcullis or the doors.

Stables line the north and south walls of the room. Straw fills all of the stables.

Two sets of spiral staircases lead from this room. The door to the southwest staircase stands 5 feet from the double doors. The door to the northwest staircase stands behind the stables along the north wall.

Beyond the stables to the east, two doors line the north wall, and three doors line the south wall. A carved sign has been hung on each door. The signs on the north doors are in Common and read, from west to east, "Stairs," and "Food Storage." The signs on the south doors are also in Common and read, from west to east, "Blacksmith," "Kitchen Entrance," and "Kitchen Exit."

Out of the darkness, a monster attacks you! You are the pet food! You automatically lose initiative. Follow the steps in entry R14 to determine what type of monster has attacked you.

If you defeat the monster, you may go through the south door (entry L73). If the monster defeats you, read entry C42.

Make sure you record any changes to your hit rolls on your character sheet.

A sleep spell does not work if you encounter one of the following monsters: giant draco lizard, lion, tiger, or weretiger.

For details on defensive maneuvers (retreating, throwing food or treasure to a monster), read entry R8.

L84. The ghost hovers above the floor. Cool breezes blow around you.

"You have done well, adventurer," the ghost says. "You have passed many tests, seen and unseen, to get this far. I hope you have learned that determination often succeeds where strength fails. You are proof that a clear mind and good health are better tools than weapons and magic."

Sargon's ghost swirls around behind you. As you turn, it speaks again. "If you came here hoping to become my heir, congratulations. You already are. My castle's treasures are transient ones of worldly value and fading magic. The true treasure is within you—the benefits of the experience you have gained.

"If you are ailing, go to the east room on the third level of my castle. If you carry no light source, I have coals in the room below that you may have. Go now, brave heir. Leave this place of death and decay forever. If you enter again, it will only cause you grief. I give you my ring as a sign that you are my rightful heir."

The swirling mass slowly dissipates. The breezes diminish. As the room grows warmer, a silver signet ring appears on your finger. The ring bears the head of a lion.

You have succeeded in your quest! If you wish, you may continue to explore the castle. You may go through the trapdoor in the floor (entry L74). As soon as you decide to leave the castle, you are instantly teleported back to the tavern in Sarsdell. Read entry L89.

If you do not wish to continue exploring, you are instantly teleported back to the tavern in Sarsdell, where you began your quest. Read entry L89.

L85. Your attack has no effect. Sargon's ghost laughs at you.

"Your attack cannot harm me now, mortal. I am beyond your power in this form." Sparks of lightning fly from the ghost's fingertips. Make a saving throw vs. spells. If your saving throw succeeds, read entry L88. If your saving throw fails, read entry L87.

L89. You materialize in a corner of the tavern. The tavernkeeper notices you instantly.

"Look, mates! Look who's returned! And in one piece yet! Congratulations, adventurer. You survived Lion Castle."

Your friends gather around you. The tavernkeeper notices the ring on your finger and grabs your hand. His voice lowers almost to a whisper. "My friend, you are an heir to Sargon. This ring proves it."

"What's the ring worth?" one of your friends calls out.

"Why, at least a thousand gold pieces. Maybe a hundred more," replies the tavernkeeper.

"Ah, why don't you cash it in, pal?" your friend says.

Before you even have a chance to speak, the tavernkeeper silences your friend. "Are you mad? Cashing in such a ring would tarnish Sargon's mighty name! This adventurer is an heir to the greatest wizard that ever walked these lands! I dare say that is a fine reward in itself. So don't just stand there, get this tired soul a hot meal!"

In addition to gaining experience points for defeating monsters and collecting treasure, your character automatically gains one level of experience.

If you wish to play this adventure again, read entry R19.

If you have a rope of climbing, you may use it as a normal rope, even if an entry says you cannot use a rope of climbing.

If you want, you may use this character in other D&D® Basic Game Adventures.

COMBAT CHECKLIST

- A. Initiative: Roll 1d6 for each side to determine who gains initiative. (Pit vipers always gain initiative and attack first.)
- B. The side that wins the initiative acts first:
  1. Morale check (monster only)
  2. Movement (defensive maneuvers)
  3. Magic spells
    - a. Make saving throw (if necessary)
    - b. Apply results immediately. Skip to step C.
  4. Hand-to-hand combat
    - a. Make hit rolls
    - b. Roll damage for hits
- C. The side that lost initiative now completes all the actions listed in step B.
- D. If neither side is defeated, continue combat by repeating steps A through D.

GHOST of Lion Castle

by Merle M. Rasmussen

"A great cat sits upon the northern grasslands, my friend, waiting to pounce on adventurers just like you." As you part the tall grass with your sword, the words of the tavernkeeper echo in your head.

"He was the mightiest wizard we'd ever known, and that Lion Castle was his home." Your friends' voices mingle with the tavernkeeper's. "He's but a ghost now, haunting those halls, and waiting for an heir."

The ground rises slightly. A strong wind rushes through the field. Suddenly, the grasses part, and Lion Castle rises majestically before you!

"Magical riches await those who enter!" "Beware of man-beasts!" Voices flood your head again. Will you brave the haunted castle? Can you afford not to? It's all up to you in this D&D® Solo Adventure.

Ghost of Lion Castle is for one player only, but that one player makes all of the choices and enjoys all of the rewards. An entire castle and courtyard await your exploration. The adventure also includes a complete solo combat system.
